DON'T FORGET MARCH!

Many of our citizens are now receiving good salaries and good pay for what they have to sell. Some of them may be tempted to treat themselves during the Christmas season. Well and good. But before any of us do very much spending, it might pay to take time out to figure out how much income tax you will have to pay in to Uncle Sam in March! Chances are that when you have done that, you will decide you had best start right now laying aside some money each pay day, so you will be able to pay up!

EVEN ADOLPH CAN LEARN

Roanoke World-News

Said Adolph Hitler on September 30, in his winter relief speech in Berlin:

"Stalingrad will be taken— you can be sure of that."

Said Adolph Hitler on November 8, in his Putsch anniversary speech in Munich:

"Stalingrad is not worth a second Verdun."

It might be argued that even a Hitler can learn. But how costly his education has been to the German people, to the millions who have died in the cold of the Russian Steppes! Some day the whole population of Germany may wake up to the fact that the education of Adolph has not been worth while.

HOW MANY "HOGS" DO YOU KNOW IN OUR OUR COMMUNITY?

Our contemporary, The Bedford Bulletin, has some strong words to say about "hoarders." Says the Bulletin:

"Hogs put their feet in the feeding trough and go at the job of filling bellies without the slightest regard for how other members of the herd are faring. That's the hog's nature. Nobody expects a hog to behave any other way.

"Humans, though, are supposed to be different. True, their nature originally was about on a par with that of swine. But they were endowed with intellect, the power to reason and think. That distinguishes man from the brute creation, at least it is supposed to. And then, mankind has enjoyed the benefits and blessings of Christian civilization for nearly two thousand years, and this experience should have purged his nature of still more of its natural dross. One would think that man, with his heritage of culture and education, plus Christian training, would by now have advanced to a height well above his original parity with swine, but observation and experience fails to bear out the generally accepted theory that we have gotten away from our brute instincts. A lot of us still display the tendency to get our feet in the trough, shove our neighbor aside at least until we have had all we want.

"The immediate provocation for these observations is the rush and scramble of a lot of people to hoard coffee and other food prior to the date when they will be placed on the list of rationed commodities. . . .

"The picture thus presented is not a pleasant one to look at. It creates fears and misgivings as to present and future; fosters the belief that we of the United States have forsaken the principle which lived so strongly in the minds and hearts and spirits of our forbears that they gladly sacrificed everything, life itself in thousands of instances, to bring into a nation dedicated to freedom from oppression, fear and want. We question the right of a man to live under a free government if his conception of citizenship rises no higher than a desire, as expressed in hoarding, of faring better than his neighbors, particularly during a period of national peril. It is bad enough at any time to witness the sorry spectacle of a citizen of this country playing the role of a swine. Such practice becomes alarming and disgusting when it is seen at a time when only sacrifice upon the part of the whole population can save us from disaster. * * *"

Seek Cooperation

Richmond, Nov. 25.- When the nation-wide "Share the Meat" campaign for voluntary meat rationing starts on Monday, November 30, it will be necessary for every resident of Virginia to do his part, according to J. H. Wyrs, Co-ordinator of the State Office of Civilian Defense.

"Virginia's Defense Councils have organized for the campaign," said Mr. Wyse today, "and with the cooperation of the Virginia State Nutrition Committee, it is planned to enlist every resident of Virginia in this home front war against the Axis.

The meats to be rationed voluntarily are beef, veal, lamb, mutton and pork, including sausage and canned meats made from these products. There is to be no restriction on the consumption of fish, poultry, or small game, nor on the so-called "variety" meats, such as kidney, liver, brains, sweetbreads and tongue.

Sten Gun

A PARACHUTE TROOPER of the British Army Air Corps demonstrates the new British Sten gun. A very light submachine gun, is so simple and cheap that it is being manufactured in huge quantities Commandos who already have used it in enemy territory say they found useful the fact that the Sten uses a type of ammunition common in Axis Europe. They were able to come by fresh supplies of bullets along the way.
